

ASSISTANT PRINCIPAL REPORT

When I walk through the door at Lavers Hill this morning the first thing I notice is the work that has begun in preparation for Aladdin. It creates such a buzz within the school as students and staff start seeing it all come together. I see sets being developed and costumes being collected, very exciting.

Not having visited Lavers Hill Campus in some time I started my day with a walk through and visiting the classes.

VCE students are working hard, heads are down so I didn't dare disturb their class.

I see students wearing their AIME jumpers with pride around the school which is fantastic. AIME stands for Australian Indigenous Mentoring Experience. AIME is a wonderful program and the feedback has been great from our students both at Ignition Point and Turning Point. We have some students attending AIME this Friday with Kirra Greaves.

In the prep-2 room I visit whilst they're doing Inquiry, where they are learning about Celebrations and students are very happy to talk about their favourite celebration.

It's great to see our students taking the initiative on things. Zoey Williamson announced to the primary class this morning that she had an idea that she had talked with her dad about, and that was to collect the food scraps and take them home for her pigs. Well done Zoey I think that is a wonderful idea.

Over lunch, the weather really "turned it on" so it was an indoor day. Students gathered in the canteen working on a jigsaw puzzle of the Eiffel tower which Ella tells me they had only been working on for a couple of days. Wow.

It was great to be able to interact with the students and hear their news. I will be working from Lavers Hill on a Wednesday now so that Tony and I can work through preparations for the School Review as well as plans for 2019 for both our Lavers Hill and Turning Point Campus.
